Anne Davies is Fellow and Tutor in Law at Brasenose College, Oxford University. She is the author of two books and numerous articles in the fields of public law and labor law.

In public law, Davies has a particular interest in government contracts. Her D.Phil. thesis examined contract in the National Health Service. She developed this research into a book Accountability: A Public Law Analysis of Government By Contract (Oxford, 2001). She has also written articles on the regulation of the medical profession and on accountability and autonomy issues in the National Health Service. She is currently conducting a wider examination of government procurement and public/private partnership contracts.

Davies is also author of Perspectives on Labour Law (Cambridge, 2004), which examines a selection of topics in English labor law in the light of international human rights instruments and various economic arguments.

Davies studied at Oxford, completing the B.A. in 1995 (winning the Gibbs and Martin Wronker Prizes) and the D.Phil. in 1999. She was a Prize Fellow at All Souls College from 1995 to 2001, and a Visiting Scholar at the University of Michigan in 1999.
